INTRODUCTION

Political developments in South Africa during 1990 had encouraging reverberations in sports organizations in that country. At the same time, the intensification of the campaign against apartheid sports inside and outside South Africa has deterred several overseas sports teams from venturing to compete there. For the first time since the publication of the Register, there has been a significant decrease in the number of sports exchanges with South Africa.

I. ENGLISH "REBEL" CRICKET TOUR

Despite worldwide protests, a group of English cricketers, captained by former English international Mike Gatting, arrived in South Africa in January 1990 to play a series of matches against teams of the White-dominated South African Cricket Union (SACU).

Anti-apartheid groups staged widespread protests against the English cricketers right from their pre-departure press conference at a London airport ^{1/} to their arrival in South Africa. While in South Africa, the National Sports Congress now known as the National Olympic and Sports Congress (NOSC), organized massive demonstrations at every match venue, while trade unionists refused to service the English cricketers at the hotels where they were accommodated. ^{2/} The South African police, as has been their normal practice, tried to disperse these peaceful demonstrations by the use of excessive force, ^{3/} and in one instance, the throwing of 10 tear-gas cylinders at a protest meeting at Bloemfontein, thereby injuring more than 60 people. ^{4/}

Halfway through the tour, the organizers of the tour met with officials of the National Sports Congress and mutually agreed to cancel the remaining part of the tour. ^{5/}

By September 1990, there was a complete turn-around of events. The two national controlling bodies of cricket in South Africa, i.e., the South African Cricket Board (SACB) and SACU, had agreed to form a single non-racial organization. ^{6/} They resolved to dispense with past policies and practices and to work towards developing the game in a truly integrated structure.

By December 1990, the two bodies had agreed to form and operate a single project for the development of cricket amongst underprivileged groups and it was announced that they would seek assistance from the South African business community to redress past imbalances in regard to separate educational systems, sponsorships and facilities. ^{7/}

II. INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE AGAINST APARTHEID IN SPORTS

The Fourth International Conference against Apartheid in Sports, organized by the Special Committee against Apartheid, the Swedish Sports Confederation, the Swedish National Olympic Committee, the Supreme Council for Sport in Africa, the South African Non-Racial Olympic Committee (SAN-ROC) and the International Campaign against Apartheid Sport, met at Stockholm from 4 to 6 September 1990. The Conference was officially opened by H.E. Mr. Ibrahim Gambari, Chairman of the Special Committee against Apartheid. The Conference proceeded with a welcome address from H.R.H. Prince Bertil of Sweden. Keynote addresses were given by Mr. Ingvar Carlsson, Prime Minister of Sweden, H.E. Major-General Joseph Garba, President of the United Nations General Assembly and Mr. Juan Antonio Samaranch, President of the International Olympic Committee (IOC). Mr. Samaranch made it clear that IOC would consult with its African partners before making any decision on South Africa. Statements were also made by H.E. Mr. James Victor Gbeho, Chairman of the Commission against Apartheid in Sports, and Mr. Sotirios Mousouris, Assistant Secretary-General and Director of the Centre against Apartheid. The Conference was attended by representatives from a wide spectrum of the international anti-apartheid groups, including governmental representatives, national, regional and international sports bodies, anti-apartheid organizations, South African liberation movements and sports organizations. There were 190 delegates from over 40 countries present at the Conference.

At the conclusion of the Conference, the delegates declared that there should be no relaxation of the sports boycott at that stage. It was felt that any relaxation would seriously prejudice the objective of successful negotiations towards the goal of an apartheid-free South Africa. The Conference felt that advances made so far were insufficient to warrant at that stage any consideration of the lifting of the prohibitions against sporting contacts. A call was made to all concerned to maintain and tighten the boycott of apartheid sports until the genuine representatives of the people of South Africa pronounce themselves satisfied that the process of transition is both profound and irreversible.

The Conference ended on a note of optimism and with the expressed hope that such a conference would not be needed in two years time. 8/

III. APARTHEID AND OLYMPISM

The IOC Commission on Apartheid and olympism continued to monitor developments in South African sport. At the meeting of the Commission held in February 1990 in Kuwait, at the invitation of the late Sheikh Fahad Al Sabah, the Commission decided that it would consider providing concrete assistance to the disadvantaged section of South African sport so as to redress the inequities that existed there at the moment. 9/

H.E. Mr. Victor Gbeho also participated in the Commission's meeting in Kuwait. He urged IOC to continue its work against apartheid in sports, as this would certainly induce favourable change in South Africa.

In December 1990, IOC announced that it would send a delegation of the Commission on Apartheid and Olympism to visit South Africa early in 1991.

Mr. Keba Mbaye, a judge at the International Court of Justice, IOC member from Senegal and Chairman of the Commission on Apartheid and Olympism, said that the ongoing changes that were taking place at such an unprecedented speed inevitably gave rise to discussions on the possibility of South Africa's return to the Olympic Games in 1992. 10/

IV. SUPPORT FOR THE SPORTS MORATORIUM

It has long been the belief of Blacks that South Africans themselves must refrain from engaging in international sports (i.e., observe a moratorium) if integration and non-racialism is to be hastened. That would also help the creation of a climate of trust during the process of achieving unity in South African sports. It appears that White establishment organizations have understood this position.

After the chaotic English cricket tour of January 1990, SACU, which organized the visit, decided that it would not initiate any new overseas sports exchanges. Earlier, the White South African Amateur Athletic Union (SAAAU) also decided to observe the moratorium.

In October 1990, NOSC decided to organize mass protests at golf venues if overseas golfers were allowed to compete in the South African golf circuit, which normally attracts over 50 foreign golfers. After a series of meetings between NOSC and the South African Professional Golfers Association, it was jointly agreed that no overseas golfers would be invited to compete in South Africa from 1991 onwards if apartheid still existed. However, for the 1990 session, only the top 20 qualifiers would be allowed to enter. 11/

NOSC also reached an agreement with the organizers of the Million Dollar Golf Challenge at Sun City, Bophuthatswana, that the tournament scheduled for December 1990 would be the last to include foreign golfers. 11/

V. ABOLITION OF THE SEPARATE AMENITIES ACT

In June 1990, the South African Government announced the abolition of the Separate Amenities Act of 1953, but local authorities were given until 15 October to comply. This Act ensured exclusive use of most sports facilities for the White minority population of South Africa. Although many of the White liberal municipalities accepted the abolition of this discriminatory Act and opened up their facilities to all races, the Conservative Party went out of its way to ensure that the facilities that were in areas controlled by its party remained exclusively White. Blacks who attempted to use facilities, such as swimming pools and libraries, were asked to pay high admission fees. Such prohibitive fees were a means of ensuring that these facilities remained for White use only. 12/

VI. MEETING WITH THE SOUTH AFRICAN SPORTS OFFICIALS AT HARARE

On 3 and 4 November 1990, the Association of National Olympic Committees of Africa (ANOCA) met with South African sports officials at Harare to discuss developments in South Africa and their impact on sports.

At the end of the two-day meeting, the President of ANOCA, Mr. Jean Claude Ganga, announced that the abolition of apartheid and the formation of single non-racial sports bodies were the prerequisites for South Africa's participation in international competitions. However, in the interim, it was considered that the training of coaches, assistance in the development programme and the sending of foreign coaches would be viewed as a means of redressing the historical inequities of apartheid.

In this connection, ANOCA decided to create two committees:

(a) The Committee of Eight (later enlarged to 10 members), made up of representatives of South Africa's five multi-sports organizations to promote unity in sport and to coordinate actions to eradicate apartheid;

(b) The Follow-up and Supervisory Committee of ANOCA to monitor developments in South African sport and to assist the Committee of Ten in achieving its objectives. 13/

One of the significant results of the Harare meeting was that most, if not all, South African sports organizations were contemplating moves towards uniting the various factions of sport. The following sports are now deeply involved in unity talks that, it is hoped, will result in single non-racial organizations emerging: athletics, boxing, cricket, football, golf, gymnastics, hockey, karate, rugby, softball, swimming, table tennis and tennis.

VII. CONCLUSION

Although the year began with serious policy differences between the White establishment sports groups and the antiapartheid sports forces, by the end of the year many sports groups were progressively working in harmony to achieve unity in South African sports. This certainly augurs well for South African sports. As was agreed at the conclusion of the International Conference against Apartheid in Sports held in Sweden in September 1990, there is a great deal of optimism about the future of South African sports. If these developments are sustained, it is expected that in the course of 1991 the Special Committee will review its policy and determine how long the Register would continue to be issued. Much depends on the progress that will be made in integrating sports in South Africa, in eliminating apartheid from sports and society and in establishing of a non-racial, united, democratic country.
